

Prof. Ellen Goldberg

Ellen Goldberg is currently Associate Professor of Religious Studies at Queen's University, Kingston, Canada. Ellen obtained an MA and a PhD in Religious Studies from the Centre for the Study of Religion at the University of Toronto, Canada. Her doctoral work published in 2002 under the title The Lord Who Is Half Woman: Ardhanārīśvara in Indian and Feminist Perspective (SUNY Press)

includes an extensive analysis of the significance of Ardhanārīśvara in haṭha and tantric yoga. Goldberg has also written several articles on the intersection between yoga and cognitive science. She has authored a chapter on “Swami Kṛpalvānanda” for a book edited with Mark Singleton titled Gurus of Modern Yoga and has an article on “Amrit Desai and the Kripalu Center for Yoga and Holistic Health” in Lola Williamson and Anne Gleig’s book titled Homegrown Gurus: From Hinduism in America to American Hinduism (SUNY Press). Ellen’s other projects include articles on “Pārvatī” and “Ardhanārīśvara” for the newly launched Oxford Online Bibliographic Series and a book in preparation on Swami Kṛpalvānanda’s contributions to modern yoga.
